NOTE FROM THE DIRECTOR

Has labor force participation in South Carolina been going up or down this year? Check out the graphs on page 15.

It is an incredibly exciting time here at the Department of Employment and Workforce. As of July 1, provisions of the Statewide Education and Workforce Development Act have come into effect. This means that our Executive Director, William Floyd, is the Chair of an expanded Coordinating Council for Workforce Development (CCWD), and the state's twelve Regional Workforce Advisors have migrated to DEW from the Department of Commerce. The Legislature has directed the CCWD to lead the creation of a multi-faceted Unified State Plan for workforce development, which will include data and analytics from LMI. South Carolina is making a massive leap forward in ensuring it has the talent to compete for jobs in a global economy, and I'm excited to be part of the team.

Another provision of the act requires the collection of standard occupation classification codes and the number of hours worked when employers submit their unemployment insurance tax records starting in April 2024. While we are very sensitive to the regulatory burden on our state's businesses, this data will allow us to better identify gaps in our workforce pipeline and develop solutions to ensure that South Carolina is a great place for employers to find the workers they need, no matter what business they are in. DEW will be ramping up outreach activities to make sure everyone's questions are answered before this policy goes into effect and speak in more depth about what we will be able to accomplish together.

In this month's featured article, Ashlyn Chastain writes about a renaissance in Florence. Since becoming the regional labor force analyst for the Pee Dee area, she has been on the ground learning about the labor market information needs of workers, businesses, and government in the northeast part of the state. While many Pee Dee communities have had a rough time in recent years, the ongoing downtown redevelopment efforts and the incoming Envision AESC plant means that Florence might be turning things around (and having a new Buc-ee's doesn't hurt either). As always, if you have any questions about workforce data, please contact us at Imicustomerservice@dew.sc.gov.

REIMAGINING FLORENCE: THE JOURNEY TOWARDS DOWNTOWN REDEVELOPMENT

By Ashlyn Chastain - Workforce Insights Analyst

Florence, South Carolina, in the state's Historic Pee Dee Region, is working feverishly to reclaim its prominence among the nine municipalities in its namesake county. A redevelopment plan was initiated by the expansion of Francis Marion University in hopes of bringing the campus closer to downtown, according to assistant city manager, Clint Moore. Starting this fall, the city aims to support the enhancement of the School of Health Sciences through a bidding process for a potential new building. The new School of Health Sciences facility will accommodate 3rd- and 4th-year medical students, including MUSC's upcoming cohorts. McLeod and MUSC Florence will accept these residents for clinical rotations.

After the downtown Florence redevelopment, the city was honored with a 2023 Great American Main Street Award, one of three given this year. This award, "recognizes communities for their excellence in comprehensive preservation-based commercial district revitalization." As a result, local businesses and residents have experienced a renewed sense of pride in their community. Prior to this year, the most recent South Carolina city to receive this award was Greenville, in 2003. Apart from the attention gained through the award, the city also attracts visitors through its annual SC Pecan Music and Food Festival. This event significantly boosts the city's economy by generating employment opportunities and revenue of as much as $2 million each year.

Pecan Festival in Downtown Florence, SC

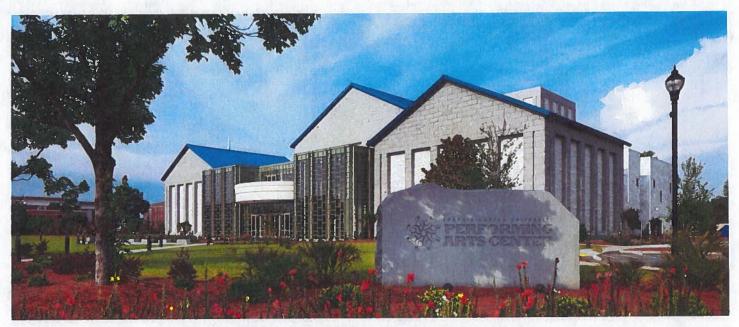

Florence Mayor Teresa Ervin believes that if there are any aspects of your city that you are not proud of, you should take action to change them. The focus is often on improving a city to attract or keep certain industries, but it is equally important to invest in improvements for citizens. The revitalization of the downtown area has done just that, positively impacting businesses, industries, and citizens, by enhancing the quality of life. While the medical industry had declined, it now receives more investment. The economic impact of these efforts continues to expand beyond the original goal, benefiting the overall economy.

Florence is committed to being a fair and inclusive city by extending redevelopment efforts towards its north and east areas. To demonstrate progress beyond the historic district, Urban Square, a redevelopment initiative, will serve as a significant example of a "mega block." Unfortunately, COVID-19 slowed the project with supply chain issues, workforce challenges, and increased costs. The Old Carolina Theater is also undergoing architectural work to transform it into a versatile event center. The project, which started in 2020, is expected to be finished within the next 12-14 months. The center is envisioned as a venue for music performances, weddings, and other events. This initiative, along with the downtown master plan, serve as excellent examples of the exciting changes in store for downtown Florence.

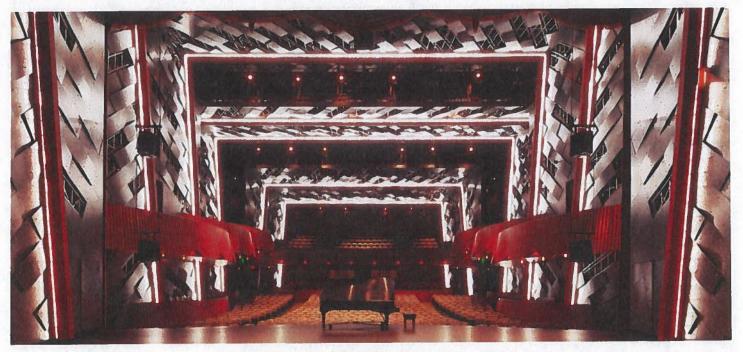

The revitalized main street, which receives support from the Francis Marion University Performing Arts Center, boasts a vibrant cultural district, boasting a library, theater, museum, the performing arts center, and more. The area's diverse restaurants offer culinary delights, showcasing local chefs' own works of art.

The city places significant importance on aiding small businesses throughout their journey, from conception to implementation. Their strategy includes incentive programs and identifying new buyers.

Transportation plans focus on accessibility by promoting and encouraging pedestrian traffic, the addition of bike paths and activity areas, offering more options for commuting. Challenges include complex collaboration among various agencies, including the Department of Transportation. The objective is to promote inclusivity by expanding transportation options beyond conventional vehicles, with corridor connections in all directions. To cater to cyclists, loop trails will be established, with routes ranging from one to five miles long. The longest loop will pass by the cemetery. Save-A-Lot and other businesses have strategically located to ensure easy access for those using the biking paths.

The Post and Courier Pee Dee launched in Florence on May 1, 2023. With more than 100 journalists in South Carolina, this new venture is a solution to the problem of "news deserts" many communities experience, where access to reliable and comprehensive local news and information is limited. The Post and Courier Pee Dee is a daily, digital newspaper that intends to be responsive to the community's need to be informed about decisions, plans, and events that impact them. The primary focus will be business, education, growth, and development in the area.

The newspaper's new location plans to eventually employ 18 interns who will serve in news, advertising, and marketing positions. These interns will be high school and college students; six interns per fall and spring semester, with two interns serving in the newsroom.

Residents can submit entries to receive the esteemed Golden Pen Award and have their letter published in the newspaper. The editorial staff selects the best letter each month for this honor. Award recipients will be invited to an annual luncheon with the editorial team.

Florence's beauty, and its rich history and culture, have captured the hearts of many. The plans for expansion and revitalization will not only enhance the city's charm but will also create more opportunities for locals and tourists alike to enjoy its bounty. With the upcoming redevelopment phase, new businesses, attractions, and facilities will continue to add to its appeal. It's no wonder that people are eager to share their excitement and encourage others to discover all the wonderful things Florence has to offer.

TECHNICAL NOTES

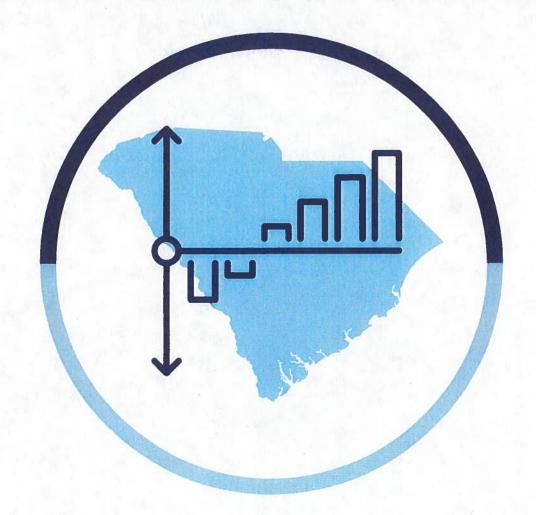

- 1. Household Survey: Nationally, there is a monthly Current Population Survey of about 60,000 households conducted by the Census Bureau for the Bureau of Labor Statistics (BLS) to determine employment status of the civilian population. This information, along with other inputs, are used by DEW to operate the Local Area Unemployment Statistics program, which estimates the number of individuals employed and those not employed, but actively seeking employment for statewide and a variety of sub-state geographies.
- Employer Survey: BLS conducts a monthly Current Employment Statistics survey of about 44,000 employers which yields national estimates of nonagricultural wage and salary employment, hours, and earnings by industry. This data is processed by DEW to generate comparable data for the state and its metropolitan statistical areas.
- Seasonally Adjusted: Seasonal adjustment removes the effects of events that follow a regular pattern each year (i.e. tourist-related hiring and school closings in the summer).
 These adjustments make it easier to observe the cyclical and other nonseasonal movements in data over time.
- 4. Not Seasonally Adjusted: Effects of regular or seasonal patterns have not been removed from this data.
